GUEST ALES

We are very big beer enthusiasts that like to switch up our offerings. These will vary in price, abv & taste...

ASK US ABOUT OUR SEASONAL AND GUEST BEERS.

I.P.A OR LAGER?

The prime differences from a lager and an IPA are their brewing processes and hop profiles.

IPA's use higher aromatic hops than lagers, giving them a deeper amber hue and more potency on the palate. Lager's use fewer hops and are defined by their clean taste which is generally smoother and crisper.

Lager's are brewed at a cooler temperature with bottom fermenting yeast, while IPA's need a warmer temperature and top fermenting yeast.

Lager's tend to have fruitier notes and a watery feel whereas an IPA will accentuate a hoppier flavour with hints of citrus.

The choice is yours and neither will disappoint.

WHAT'S CASK ALE?

Cask ale, or real ale, is beer that has gone through a secondary fermentation in the vessel from which it is dispensed. The carbonation occurs naturally from the fermentation process.

The yeast in cask ale remains alive and active and is dispensed without the use of extraneous gases. A rich and complex brew that will always be served fresh.

PIMM'S No. 1 CUP

The quintessentially British liqueur made by infusing gin with a secret concoction of botanicals, caramelised orange and spices.

Originally blended in 1840 as a digestion aid, Pimm's was sent to soldiers at war and served by Queen Victoria at her lunches. It's big debut was at Wimbledon in 1971, with which it has now become famously associated.
